Challenges for Islamic Finance and Law: Innovations and Regulations

From Islamic banking to Islamic securitization and insurance the need for innovation in Islamic financing is long recognized. Regulations are essential to manage the progress that the global Islamic finance industry has currently achieved. The objective of this conference is to explore the problems the IF industry is facing in terms of innovation and the lack of a globally recognized regulatory framework.

This conference has three major benefits. First; it highlights the current challenges in the global IF market with reference to innovations and regulations. Second; the dissemination of high quality research conducted from across the globe. Third, this event provides networking opportunities to academicians and practitioners interested in this niche area in the international financial services sector.

University College Dublin (UCD) is pleased to announce the First Islamic Finance and Law Conference 2015. The conference will be held on 14th-15th May 2015 in UCD Sutherland School of Law, Ireland. Papers are invited from practitioners, academicians and researchers on topics which fall within the broad theme of “Challenges for Islamic Finance and Law: The Need for Innovation and Regulation”.

This is a two days conference. This conference is being organized by University College Dublin, Sutherland School of Law. This event will be held in William Fry lecture theatre and Clinical Legal Education Centre (CLEC) in UCD.
